Learning About Racism: A Virtual Book Club

This year we have been shocked by numerous incidents of police brutality to black people and were disheartened when we learned that black people have disproportionately become ill and died of COVID-19.

Young people across the country have marched for a cause called Black Lives Matter. New concepts such as white fragility, systemic racism, anti-racist, and police reform are being discussed. As Christians we are called to help and to serve others and to stand up for injustice.

The purpose of this book club is simply to educate ourselves on these difficult topics so we are more prepared to make a difference. We are excited to start this important endeavor as advent begins as a way to "prepare the way of the Lord and make straight paths for him".

Mondays 8-9PM Zoom

Start Date: Nov 23rd, 2020

First book: White Fragility by Robin Diangelo – Book may be purchased from Cokesbury, Amazon, or thriftbooks.com, You can also get the audiobook from the library (two week renewal) to Cheryl Cowan who has been accepted to the Dallas Theological Seminary of Dallas, Texas. She will be studying for her Masters of Art Degree in Christian Education. Her first classes will be given on-line and start in January.

For more information or to express your interest, contact Virginia Lorenzi at vlworkaccount@gmail.com.
